

Dear Members of the FCC:

My husband and I have had XM Satellite Radio since May of 2003 and we really enjoy it. We think it is well worth the $10 a month to get the variety and quality programming that we receive from their service.

I do not see any problem that should arise from XM broadcasting traffic and weather channels. Isn't this country built on the premise of free enterprise? No one has the right to squash another's ability to provide a service to American consumers. What is next? How come they are not after The Weather Channel on cable? It is the same thing-a service provided to consumers who choose to purchase and utilize it.

Having said all that, I respectfully ask that you reject the NAB's petition 04-160 and allow XM to continue to provide its consumers the choice to purchase quality programming as an alternative to conventional radio services.

Thank you for your time and consideration.

Sincerely,

Mrs. William C. Millar (Teri)
